

Title "They have been drinking." Part 2	Date 04/19/2019

What protocol is used when the reporting party only says, "They had too much to drink and need to go to the hospital?" To this point, we have handled this under Protocol 23 to address the scene safety concerns that commonly accompany intoxicated patients. However, in the visually impaired environment that we work in, how can we tell if they truly are having an alcohol overdose or having another medical emergency?

We can accomplish this by addressing the patient's symptoms. If they have not provided any other information that could help us to select a Chief Complaint, a great clarifying question to ask is, "What kind of symptoms is he/she having?" For example, if they are drunk and in and out of consciousness, then we will process the call on Protocol 31: Unconscious/Fainting. We do not want to move past, "Okay, tell me exactly what happened," until there is a clear pathway in mind. If nothing fits, then this will be a "sick person" call.

This can get kind of confusing when speaking to a 1st party caller. What do we do when the patient calls and just says "I have been drinking"? Often times people call in to tell us they have had too much to drink and need to go to detox. When speaking to a 1st party caller, we want to address THEIR Chief Complaint. If they just want to be transported to sober up then there is an option for "transport only" on Protocol 26. However, if symptoms are mentioned, then we need to chose the Chief Complaint that best addresses that symptom.
